

Racine Marseille

Marseille Provence is the second largest city in France, and the European gateway to the south and the Mediterranean. It acts as a truly international crossroads and welcomes large projects of international scale, such as ITER. The city is contemplating investments of close to €50 billion between now and 2050. The firm has been established in the city for close to 40 years and joined Racine 20 years ago.

Racine Marseille is active in both French and international matters, principally in corporate law, commercial and business law, M&A, private equity, capital market law, association law, employment law, insurance law. Its clients include listed and private companies with strong international presence, corporate insurers and regional SMEs.

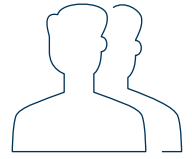

Racine Marseille has built up solid experience which is recognised by its clients through its approach of staying close to them, both as regards their day-to-day work and in the context of individual transactions (for example, fundraising, acquisitions, disposals, restructurings, etc.) and has sectorial expertise in the fields of energy and oil and gas.

Racine Marseille accompanies its clients in their international development, through the expertise of a fully bilingual team and the TAGLaw network, of which Racine is a member.

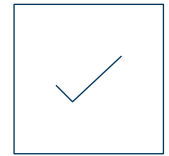

The firm also enjoys deep experience in employment law and represents companies, executives and managers in the context of defending their interests amid a profoundly unsettled legal and regulatory environment.

Racine Marseille represents its clients in litigation and advisory matters based on an “all in one” approach, all while following its values: pragmatism, being reactive, close to clients, providing expert advice and being available.

The firm is structured around centres of expertise. The teams work together in complete synergy so that they may offer a full range of services that are suited to each of their client's needs.

Closely involved in the region's economic fabric, our lawyers actively participate in management training via a number of associations, of which they are active members.

Our lawyers are committed to learning about the specificities of their client's activities and sectors so that they may offer solutions that truly respond to the issues they face, through day to day direct and personal advice. For this purpose, they receive continuous legal training, and also benefit from training in finance and technical matters and languages.

The Racine network allows the Marseille office to handle all types of matters, from start to finish, without wasting time or diminishing expertise, all while maintaining a high degree of confidentiality.

Corporate law, M&A, capital market, commercial law

Our lawyers are able to accompany their clients at each stage of corporate life (creation, development, financing, restructuring, disposals and dissolution), both in France and internationally. The team is thus involved in mergers, asset acquisitions/disposals and establishing foreign entities.

Our lawyers possess recognised expertise in corporate governance and compliance with French and international regulations and are particularly active in audits.

Thanks to its expertise in capital market, the firm is also able to assist companies with their transactions on the financial markets (IPOs, secondary fund raising, delisting, etc.). The firm also handles all issues relating to debt collections.

Our lawyers also assist their clients with drafting and negotiating all types of contracts, both in French and in English.

The team also possesses expertise in commercial litigation, both in court and before arbitral tribunals, and promotes alternative dispute resolution techniques (conciliation, mediation, etc.).

Labour law

The employment law team helps clients in all sectors and of all sizes, ranging from very small companies to multinationals. The team accompanies its clients in both in an advisory capacity and in their employment and social security litigation, in French and in English, by representing them before the relevant administrative authorities and the courts. The department handles all types of matters, whether individual, collective or "de masse", and is able to intervene at all stages of the proceedings.

Insurance law and civil liability

Racine Marseille's clients benefits from its expertise in managing litigation relating to insurance law and civil liability. Seasoned in the specificities of appraisals, the team's lawyers handle matters in the litigation and pre-litigation phases and provide their clients with practical advice so that they may efficiently resolve disputes between insurance companies and insured parties. The firm also handles civil liability in its broad sense, notably in the area of victim compensation (bodily injury, pecuniary and nonpecuniary damages, etc.).
